INTRODUCTION

The Cheltenham Chapel and its little known adjoining graveyard occupies an area between the Bowling Green on the corner of Ambrose Street and the High Street, and St. George's Place. In the Georgian & Regency periods, the area was a centre for the famous and learned, now it is sadly spoiled and dilapidated owing to demolition, and lack of care. Somehow the chapel & graveyard with its tombstones, although derelict and damaged by litter and debris has escaped the destruction of time and remains a microcosm of Georgian, Regency and early Victorian Cheltenham. Being so near to the town centre it is difficult to believe that this quiet corner with its profusion of birds, ivy & trees has hardly changed in one hundred years.

One of the founders of the Cheltenham Chapel was Reverend Rowland Hill, one of the foremost evangelical preachers of his day. He was Minister of the Surrey Chapel in London from 1783 until his death in the mid 1830's. He was also part-time Minister at Wotton, in this County. For further details on Rowland Hill, the Cheltenham Chapel and St. George's place, I advise the reading of three delightful booklets: 'Cheltenham Churches & Chapels' by Steven Blake; 'Saint George's Place' by The Cheltenham Spa Campaign; 'History of Saint Mary's Chapel, Reading'.

The graveyard was opened in 1810, and closed by order of the Home Secretary on the 22nd of October 1894, the last internment being on the 9th of January 1889. It is often necessary to correlate partly defaced inscriptions on the tombstones, with the burial registers. Unfortunately the tracing of Nonconformist registers can be difficult. For the years 1810 to 1837, the Chapel's registers are housed at the Public Record Office, Chancery Lane, London. Copies can be viewed at the Gloucester Public Library. The years 1858 to 1894 are in the possession of the United Reformed Church Headquarters in London. This echoes the fact that the Presbyterians took over the chapel in 1858, and commenced a new burial register. Unfortunately, I have not been able to trace the registers for the years 1838-57 and at present assume them to be lost. The chapel itself was sold to the Salvation Army in 1895, and several of the tombstones, numbers: 58.219.220.221.222.223.224.225, and half of 145, appear to be situated on the chapel's portion of land. The remainder of the graveyard stayed in the hands of a trustee, or trustees, and it is only recently that the United Reformed Church have gained permission to sell the graveyard. John Jeremiah Banks (owner of the late 'Banks Stationers & Newsagents in the Promenade), was a trustee. J.J.Banks died in the 1920's, and the trusteeship was inherited by two of his daughters, and on their death, by a nephew.

Permission was granted to me by the United Reformed Church to survey the churchyard. Unfortunately it was not a simple task of writing down the inscriptions on a few stones, owing to trees, ivy & peoples nasty habits with waste disposal on property other than their own. In consequence, because the majority of the memorials being vault stones laid horizontally, it was a matter of prodding with a marling fork every foot or so, followed by the time consuming removal of up to 1ft of ivy, roots and rubbish. 225 memorials have so far been found, recorded and mapped. Fortunately one end of the graveyard had been cleared in the early 1950's, and used as a garden for St. George's Cottage as a kind of caretakership in an attempt to keep down vegetation and rubbish tippers.

Most of the stones appear to be in their original positions. A number of footstones, five (16.A & 68.A), cannot be allocated to any existing headstone. On the plan, a sentence will be noted, pointing to a dot against headstones, indicating on which side of a headstone the inscription lies. Unlike the present day universal setting of a headstone, in the 19th century the inscription was often on the opposite side to that of the burial. In earlier centuries this practice was more common.

A mention should be made that the Chapel building is to be restored and it is also thought likely that the graveyard is to be preserved.

The graveyard was restored in 1990 and memorials 226, 227 & 228 came to light plus various kerbs and footstones including a shaped body stone belonging to memorial 82.
